The "Women's Touch" at Shoppers Is made by—Women

Naturally women play an important role at Shoppers, but have you ever wondered about people at the top—the ones who make the decisions?

Today you read about women executives in the bathing suit business, in model agencies and travel bureaus, but how about the thing closest to every gal—groceries?

Well, let's check them off. Mrs. Ann Gach, vice president; Mrs. Amelia Mackle, assistant store supervisor; Mrs. BeBe Warmbrand, assistant store supervisor. The long experience and understanding of these ladies has done a great deal in giving Shoppers Markets the "Women's Touch" so necessary in today's modern market.

We know a big, beautiful Super Market can be pretty impersonal at times and we also know that men, even though they think they're pretty smart most of the time, don't really know what goes on inside a woman's head unless another woman tells 'em. We have women telling us all the time — executives AND customers. But you know something? It's nice.
